

Winston Wu vs. Typical East Asians/Orientals: Differences and Similarities

Below are my traits vs. the general traits of East Asians and Orientals (Chinese, Japanese, Koreans). These traits do not apply to all East Asians of course, but in my experience, I would say most of them possess most of the traits below, including Asian Americans. Please do not accuse me of generalizing, as over 99 percent of East Asians are conformists who strive to be ALIKE, not different. So in that sense, they already “generalize themselves”. Besides, how many Asians do you know who would compile a list like this? Most likely none.

Differences

- Uniqueness is special and wonderful in and of itself, worthy of admiration and praise
- Views conforming to the system as slavery, mind control and herd mentality that dumbs you down and turns you into a robot living in fear, weakness and low vibrational consciousness

Typical East Asians (Taiwanese, Japanese, Koreans)

Good with practical materialistic things and math
Narrow minded, rigid mentality and attitude
Driven by fear and conformity, closed and indirect
Intelligent only in conventional practical areas
Repressed, robotic, stiff, stern, rigid, nonexpressive
No independent free thought, not intellectual Measures life by career, work, productivity, assets
Lives to work, workaholic, works 6 or 7 day a week
Only concerned with simple practical matters
Interested in food, work and family, not intellectual Prefers slavery, wants to be tied down
Bad grades cause guilt, shame and disgrace
Follows what is practical/realistic, sees heart as idle
Empty inside, tries to fill it with workaholic lifestyle
Lives for commitment and familiar routines
Job and marriage = stability, structure, purpose
Seeks purpose and safety in stable structured routines
Thrives on routine and stability, even in slavery
Interested in materialistic matters, no spiritual outlook
Closed, cold, strict, prudish, uptight, stern exterior
Inhibited, strict, stern, upright, nonexpressive
Introverted, closed to strangers, conservative
Indirect, subtle, shy, poor communication skills
Uses negative reinforcement to condition children
Induces guilt, weakness and fear to control workers
Parents teach you to fear your adversaries and yield
Holds that authority, majority and conformity = truth
Cares what others think and lives in fear of it
Dominated and limited by left-brained thinking
Prefers to socialize with same gender at parties
Prefers dogs, hates cats and sees them as useless
Prefers eating Chinese food everyday
- Uniqueness has no value unless accompanied by material success and benefits
- Views conforming to the system as a practical and safe means to a functioning life that ensures stability, harmony, status, security and prosperity for one's life and family
